The Light in Menlo Park.

Mr. Edison Promises to Surprise the Doubtful. A Story of His Recent Discoveries.

"There's Edison's light!" exclaimed a passenger in a train that stopped at Menlo Park last evening, and a rush to one side of the car resulted. Two bright lights glowed upon lamp-posts standing on the elevation opposite the railway station, and these were regarded with much interest and curiosity by the travelers. The Pennsylvania railroad conductors say that this is a nightly occurrence on the road. In Baltimore and Washington are often unable to withstand the temptation to see the electric apparatus in the brilliantly illuminated laboratory in the distance and remain for the next day.

Mr. Edison says that all the lights are as brilliant as when first set up, and certainly they show no loss of intensity to the ordinary observer. So pleased is he with what he considers his almost phenomenal success in the carbon principle, with incandescence instead of the voltaic arc, that he proposes soon to establish at least one electric station in New York—that is to say a station that will supply the buildings on a radius of one-third of a mile. Just how soon this will be accomplished is doubtful, but he says he believes that he has a great surprise in store for those who do not believe in his light. Either the ground floor, cellar or sub-cellar of an ordinary building will, he says, be sufficient for his purpose. In this he will set up a powerful steam engine, a dynamo machine, and several generators. Thence insulated wires will be led out to a number of buildings, and these will supply as many lights as are required.

One of the most curious objects in Edison's laboratory is an electric light that has been completely submerged in a bath of water for several weeks. It is designed for submarine work and as an assistance to divers in prosecuting their work in reaching sunken treasures and in patching up sunken ships so that they may be raised.

So constantly is Mr. Edison absorbed in his electric problems that his assistants say that he would forget to eat his meals and go to bed if he were not reminded of these things. The other day, while returning from New York, he alighted from the train at Menlo Park, forgetting that he had left his little daughter aboard. As the train was about to start on its way to Philadelphia, the conductor recognized the child. "Are you not Mr. Edison's little girl?" said he. "Yes, sir," she answered. The conductor led her to the platform. Some distance ahead her father was seen hastening to his laboratory, entirely forgetful of his negligence.

Entirely Recovered.

New York City, June 16, 1879.

Dr. H. W. WARREN & CO.—GENTLEMEN—I hereby certify that my wife has been cured of her disease, and she is now entirely recovered. When all physicians' remedies failed, she was induced to try your remedy, and received beneficial results from the first bottle. After taking four bottles she was entirely cured.

Yours truly, ROBERT R. FITZGERALD.

Guilt of Wrong.

Some people have a fashion of confusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent medicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong. There are some advertised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of—Fleming's Kidney Pills. We have had occasion to use the latter in just such a case as we have most of the year in Bay City, and has always found them to be a first-class and reliable, doing all that is claimed for them.—Tribune.
